The United States and South Korea will pay for its decision to place on the Korean Peninsula the American anti-missile system THAAD says CNBC, citing the official newspaper of the Communist party of China people's daily. If the US and South Korea will harm the strategic interests of the countries of the region including China, they will have to pay and will receive a proper counterattack quoted by CNBC commentary in the Chinese edition. The commentary was published under the pseudonym Zhong Sheng Zhong Sheng, the Voice of China which is often used to Express the views of the authorities on foreign policy, according to CNBC. China can not be indifferent to the security issues that affect its core interests, the article says the people's daily. Before the Chinese government urged Washington and Seoul to withdraw from the placement of THAAD. The US and South Korea say they plan to use the PRO to protect against North Korea but China is convinced that the placement of THAAD will not help the denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula and to resolve the situation. PRC said that she was strongly against the decision of the United States and South Korea. It is planned that the THAAD system, if necessary, to intercept ballistic missiles of North Korea the small and medium range. According to South Korean defense Ministry, the radius of THAAD is 200 kilometers. ADVERTISING Version 5.1.11 beta. To contact the editors or to report any bugs, use the feedback form.
